

weakened at the last few jumps and the official third placing. It was so close between the two that the spectators could not distinguish until the official figures were hung up. Throughout it was a magnificent race, and the time, 1:21 for the classic mile, shows the speed. Garner, the jockey, who rode the winner, was applauded for his mastery ride, and applause is due Master Garner. He is a midget of ninety pounds, but possesses a powerful knowledge of ponies when it comes to urging them to do their prettiest.

The Drake crowd bet a fortune on Oppie and Jockey Garner is now due to receive a life inheritance.

Talent Were Upset.
The day's sport began with an upset for the talents when Harry Payne Whitney's Old Faithful, an odds-on favorite in a three-horse race, was defeated. Lona Hand made the running for the first quarter, with Cresson second and Old Faithful third. That was the best the Whitney colt could do, although persuaded.

Favorite Got Quiet.
Another bon-ton favorite got his quietus in the second, when Sally Preston showed a pretty pair of heels to the titled favorite, Sir Todelington from the Lexington Stable, who blushed and retired. Sally from the humbler herd, showed the way prettily into the stretch, edging cleverly. Clear Russell, of Sally's own sex, also beat Sir Todelington, who was a bogus actor of royalty to-day and odds-on at that.

Hylas in Best Form.
A steepchase race followed the Metropolitan, with a win for Hylas, and the race was a triumph for the crowd and who ever knew a crowd that did not relish a diversion? Goldfleur, formerly a flat runner, made the jump as if nothing else was in the running. But they fooled him. Ray, on Hylas, kept them all guessing until he was ready, then he went to the front and won as he pleased. Ben Crockett out-gamed Goldfleur and got the place from the latter. The race evidenced that Hylas is back to his best form.

Favorite Was Second.
Again did an aristocratic favorite fade by the wayside, this time in the fifth event, administering a severe loss to the club-house contingent. P. R. Hitchcock's colt, Monday, a proven first choice, but couldn't make good to the chagrin of his aristocratic and following. Coming from a long line of winners, galloped off with the event from Mandarin. Adonis filling in third place comfortably.

Last a Real Race.
A real horse finished the card of the day. Gnette and Rye, nose and nose, their riders fighting it out to the last drop, finished in a dead heat. Jack McKoon was an indifferent third.

IDEAL PARENTS BACK TO REBUILD FORTUNE.

Couple Praised by Roosevelt Hurling to San Francisco to Begin Work.

Mr. and Mrs. Bartley Oliver, whom President Roosevelt praised as ideal American parents, today landed with their eight children from the Princess Irene. Mr. Oliver is a San Francisco real estate dealer, and the disaster of the Golden Gate city abruptly ended the two years' trip around the world on which the family started last October.

"I am ruined and will have to start life all over again," said Mr. Oliver simply in explaining his sudden return. The Olivers were in Naples watching Vesuvius's terrible splendor when the news of their own loss came to them. It was San Francisco day on the Irene, apparently, for in addition to the Olivers there were on the passenger list Mrs. Frank Norris, widow of the brilliant young California writer. Mrs. Norris was met at the dock by another San Francisco celebrity—Lloyd Bourne, stepson and collaborator of Robert Louis Stevenson. The meeting was very tropical. Mr. Bourne kissed Mrs. Norris right before everybody. When the ship news reporters asked her about it Mrs. Norris denied that they were engaged.

FREEZE TO-NIGHT, SAYS EMERY—SAD WIGHT

Alack! in May, Oh, Rueful Day, the Balm Sun Has Lost His Sway!

"That spring is not yet merging into the balmy atmosphere of summer just yet is plain to-day to everybody in New York who has gone out of doors. The crowds on the elevated and subway trains in the rush hours this morning looked as if it was some time on the edge of winter, for overcoats were everywhere in evidence. Moreover, now comes Forecaster Emery to prophesy a real frost to-night.

The cool area has extended over the middle West and even as far South as Georgia, Tennessee and Virginia, where there were heavy frosts last night. The cold wave is coming north as far as the Maine coast and will last over night. But Emery, from his rain-making tapes on lower Broadway, sends forth the news that there will be no rain and that to-morrow will be fair and warmer—that is he guesses so.

RUSSIANS CHEER AMERICAN AMBASSADOR.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 10 (U.S. A.).—Mr. Ambassador Meyer was accorded a rousing reception from the crowd in front of the Tauride Garden this afternoon, as the Lower House of Parliament assembled. When he drove up there was tremendous cheering for the representative of free America. The people wanted to take out the horses and draw the Ambassador's carriage with their hands, but this he would not permit, alighting without assistance and walking in the midst of cheering thousands to the gates.

The Lower House was called to order at five P. M. by Baron Frick and Baron Uexkull, Secretary of the Empire. Baron Frick read an Imperial ukaz convoking Parliament and invited members to come forward and sign the call.

Prof. Morozov, the candidate of the Constitutional Democrats, was elected president.

MRS. DUKE APPEALS IN DIVORCE CASE.

(Special to The Evening World.)
NEWARK, N. J., May 10.—Baroness Parker and Samuel Klayton for Mrs. Lillian N. Duke, have filed an appeal from the decision of Vice-Chancellor Pitney in the divorce case with the clerk of the Chancery Court.

RED-HAIRED BOY'S STORY FALSE, SAYS MRS. LAWSON

Woman Sued for Divorce Denies that Young Carmichael Ever Kissed Her, as Testified at Trial.

Dramatically waving her handkerchief and pointing scornfully to her husband, Mrs. William M. Lawson late this afternoon took the stand in the Supreme Court of Brooklyn and denied in detail all the stories that have been brought out regarding her relations with the red-headed correspondent and five other boys whose names have been mentioned in her husband's suit for divorce.

According to her testimony, the snive incidents that have tended to make the case sound like the Rubiyat of a Brooklyn Boarding-House are all fictitious, and she has wandered mournfully from one place to another, looking upon the necessity of living in a boarding-house as a humiliation.

The court-room was crowded with women, as it has been ever since the stories of alleged boy lovers were unfolded. There was little expectation until late this afternoon of Mrs. Lawson going on the stand. She was taking headache powders all through the session, and her lawyer asked her if she felt well enough to testify.

"Certainly," she said loudly enough to be heard by the crowd. "I can go alone."

With this she brushed past her lawyer. At first she spoke in an even voice, but in a few minutes she became excited and dramatic. Prior to her testimony four of her boy friends, several boarding-house keepers, servants and her aunt testified to her good character, and denied the story of Carmichael and other of her husband's witnesses.

Married Eleven Years Ago.

In reply to her counsel's questions she said her full name is Lona Lawrence Morrison Lawson, and that she was married to William M. Lawson, the millionaire Jute manufacturer, eleven years ago on June 11. She said her two children, Roy, eight years old, and Oliver, ten years old. At the time her marriage, she said her husband was earning $25 a week working for his father and they were obliged to live within that income.

Lawyer Mooney then asked: "Has Carmichael ever kissed you or have you ever been guilty of any improprieties with this man—or, I should say boy?"

Mrs. Lawson arched her eyebrows and asked if he had to answer with one word. When told that she must she exclaimed:

Boy Never Kissed Her.

"Well, if I can't say more than one word I'll say that one loud. It is No."

She said that she got $500 for her house and took Carmichael with her to the Clarendon Hotel on the understanding that he would guard the children and gather evidence on which to base a divorce action against her husband. To return she was to pay for his room and board, and give him $3 a week.

"I thought I had a good case for divorce from what he told me," she said. "and then I found he was not doing anything but spending my money." She denied that he ever came into her room or that she was ever in his. Stories of their drinking together and fighting when drunk were also refuted with many waves of her handkerchief. She said that she never drank champagne more than once with Carmichael, and that she drank it then because she was accustomed to have it in her father's house. She said she was very fond of vichy and drank that and mineral water exclusively.

Says Boy Lost on Races.

She explained her leaving the Clarendon Hotel by saying that she quarreled with Carmichael because he appropriated $33 from the sale of some furniture. He told her he had bet on the races and lost.

"I wanted the money," she declared. "and I told him so. The proprietor heard us and came up, but Carmichael ran to his room and locked the door. I told the proprietor and asked that Carmichael be thrown out since I would not pay his bills any longer. This was done, I was not put out. I left later of my own accord."

She said in January, 1920, her father made her a present of the house on Union street, where young Carmichael said he was housewired. On September eleventh of the same year her husband left her.

"I saw him afterwards and told him I had no money," she testified. "He told me to go and sell my piano. I asked him to sell it for me. He did, and got $50 for it."

Here she half rose from her chair and pointing a quivering finger at him shouted in a high voice:

Throw Money in Her Face.

"And then he, he threw the money in my face and went away."

Mr. Lawson turned very red and several jurors whispered to one another. She said she received some money from her husband Oct. 23, 1920, and from that time until June, 1921, she received nothing more from him. At that time, she said, she sold the Union street house. In the fall she was obliged to send for him.

"Little Oliver was sick," she said, holding her handkerchief to her eyes. "and he needed a doctor and a nurse. I had no money and sent for him."

Here she pointed again at her husband, and when Lawyer Mooney asked if she meant to say her husband, she replied:

"Oh, well, call him Mr. Lawson."

She was asked as to her meeting with Carmichael, who she flirted with her on a trolley car.

"I was going down town on Fulton street," she said, "with my cousin, James Morrison, who has since died, and we met Carmichael. My cousin knew him and introduced him to me. Then we walked together and I made some purchases in a store. They both walked back as far as the house with me."

She said that the next time she met Carmichael was at her aunt's, where he was calling on her cousin. Occasionally afterwards, she said, she met Carmichael, who, in every instance, was her cousin. "A month later," she said, "my cousin got work in a broker's office in

WHO SAID TERRY'S BROTHER WAS WED?

"Nothin' Doin'," Said Hughey McGovern as to Rumor About Dolly Grey.

Mr. Hughey McGovern, brother of Terrence Terry, took occasion to-day to vigorously deny the rumor of his marriage to Dolly Grey. Dolly is a model lady, who says she poses for Howard Chandler Christy. She is a tall and very stunning blonde, but Hughey says she has never enthrilled him.

"Far be it from me," quoth Hughey. "to hitch into myself a wife. What's more, they ain't no chance of it for all I can see. I kept company with Dolly Grey, but friends of mine took to calling her the soldier boy, and the song quered the act. She was a corker, though. I guess I kept company with her for a year. The separation came six months ago."

Hughey wiped a tear.

"She was free with other men for one thing. But call it off. Not for me the bonds of matrimony."

BANKER'S SON PUTS FATHER IN BELLEVUE.

Henry Carey, a retired banker, who has been prominent in financial circles for twenty years, is in Bellevue Hospital, where, at the request of his son he was committed to the psychopathic ward for examination.

Young Mr. Carey said his father had not been in his right mind for some time, his condition being due to age and general debility. He took his father to Bellevue because he thought he would receive better treatment there than in a private institution.

Dr. Holmes, of the psychopathic division, said to-day that Mr. Carey was suffering from overwork and worry, had hallucinations and was unable to give any account of himself.

BROOKLYN TROLLEY SMASHES A WAGON.

A Court street car was bowling down hill toward the Fulton Ferry, Brooklyn, to-day, when it struck a wagon, upsetting the vehicle and throwing its occupants twenty feet.

Max Levenberg, the driver, landed on his head and sustained a fractured skull. He was taken to the Brooklyn Hospital. Levenberg is thirty-six years old and lives at No. 48 Belmont avenue, Brooklyn. His helper, Henry Liverman, nineteen years old, of No. 70 Belmont avenue, was cut and bruised. The ambulance surgeon attended him and sent him home.

TRAIN KILLED NEW YORKER.

(Special to The Evening World.)
SARATOGA, N. Y., May 10.—Giuseppe Santoro, of New York, was struck by a Delaware and Hudson Railroad train early to-day and died some hours later in the hospital here.

He was 42 years old.

Mr. Santoro was a well-known contractor, who resides at No. 55 Coney street, this city, and also for Clederie Pierandino, nineteen years of age, who was employed by Pierandino, as a carpenter.

Lanzelle told the police here to-day that when he returned to his home on Tuesday afternoon, he discovered that his wife had left the house, taking with her their ten-year-old daughter. She also took all the money there was in the house and dressed herself in her best clothes.

Pierandino failed to return to the house on Tuesday night and Lanzelle says he has not seen him nor heard from him since, and he believes that if the police trace him, his wife and his former employee will also be found. He says he is anxious to get back his child.

SEVEN HURT IN WRECK OF NEW YORK LIMITED.

PORTSMOUTH, O., May 10.—The New York Limited train on the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, which left Cincinnati last night, was derailed near Buena Vista station, one hundred miles east of Cincinnati, early to-day.

The sleeping car was derailed, but of the sixteen passengers on it only four were injured. One of them, Mrs. D. J. McKelvey, of Cincinnati, being seriously hurt.

The identity of the other three women is not known. Three trainmen were injured.

A broken rail caused the accident.

HELD AN AUTOPSY, DOCTOR ARRESTED

Father of Baby Says Bellevue Physician Acted Without Permission.

Dr. R. N. Woodruff, chief of the medical staff of Bellevue Hospital, was arrested and arraigned in Centre Street Court to-day charged with performing an autopsy on a child's body in the Morgue without the consent of the child's relatives.

The child was Charles M. Petit-Jean, son of Anthony Petit-Jean, of Rahway, N. J. Magistrate Wahl, who issued the warrant, paroled the doctor in the custody of his counsel, Attorney Burns, and set the hearing for May 17.

Mr. Petit-Jean in his affidavit said after the death of his wife in the latter part of March he took the six-months-old child to the baby's grandparents in New York. On April 5 he saw the child for the first time since bringing him to New York and learned the baby was ill. He carried the infant in his arms to Bellevue, where he was told the case was typhoid. The baby died on April 7.

The father alleges that Dr. Woodruff said the case was a puzzling one and asked permission to perform an autopsy, which was refused. The following day he was told by the undertaker, William Knowles of Elizabeth, that an incision had been made in the abdomen of the infant's body. Mr. Petit-Jean says that the physician admitted making the cutting when accused.

MUST DIE ON THE GALLOWS.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., May 10.—Samuel Melech, who was yesterday found guilty of murdering Mrs. Mattie Hart Becker at her home in Morristown, was to-day sentenced to be hanged on June 15 in the Morris County jail here. The prisoner took his sentence coolly.
